The American Hog Gets Into Germany.

RECIPROCITY IS THE FASHION.

He Will Pay His Admission With Pork Sugar A Large Increase in Trade Expected—American Corn for Russian Rye.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Secretary Rusk today received official notice that the German government has raised the embargo on American pork. The agreement relating to the admission of pork into Germany was signed at Pope May Point about ten days ago, but at the request of the German government the fact was withheld from the public press until official action could be taken by the Berne government. The agreement not only provides for the admittance of our pork into Germany, but also affords to the United States the same schedule with reference to our farm products as that enjoyed by Russia. Secretary Rusk is confident that he will soon be able to extend our market for corn by introducing it into Germany for use as an article of food in the place of rye, the crop of which in Germany is this year exceedingly short. To this end, he has instructed his corn agent, Col. C. J. Murphy, now in Europe, to proceed at once to Berlin and lay the matter before the German government.

THE REPORT CONFIRMED.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—The Reichsblatt publishes an order to the effect that the prohibition of the importation of swine, pork and sausage of American origin shall no longer be enforced when such live pig or hog products are furnished with official certificates stating that they have been examined in accordance with American regulations and found free from qualities dangerous to health. The chancellor has sent instructions to the proper officials to the order be given immediate effect.

RUSSIA RAISES DUTIES.

New York, Sept. 3.—According to a Washington special an arrangement has been made between the United States and Germany by which the latter country will revoke her decree issued in 1890 and 1892, excluding American pork, bacon and other hog products, in return for which the duty on beet sugar imported into the United States created by the McKinley bill will not be restored by President Harrison, who has the power to restore it under the act. This arrangement will not take the form of a treaty, but a proclamation will be issued by President Harrison regarding the beet sugar duty, as soon as he is officially notified of the removal by the German government of the restriction against American pork.

Train Robbers Not Found.

Colorado, Colo., Sept. 3.—There are no new developments in the train robbery affair yet. It is now pretty thoroughly demonstrated that only a portion of the band of robbers who took to the trail that was followed by the bloodhounds, and it is believed by those who have made good their escape. The hounds cannot keep on the trail at all, as they were following the scent of [illegible] and are of little use in this [illegible]

The indications now along that the robbery is planned by residents of this valley, and it at least a portion of the party is yet here while apparently assisting in the search they have their eyes open and their ears open, and it is only by the most careful detective work that they will be caught.

It is now believed that the gang that went south is well out of the way of the pursuers by the pursuit at least and that instead of [illegible] through the Grand River valley [illegible] Huerfano county they went in nearer the mountains ranged toward the head of the St. Charles. The fleeing party is supposed to be well acquainted with the entire country as the oldest resident, and in fact to be just the old McCoy gang that was partially taken up when Elliott and Cole were arrested.

The detectives who came here this morning after the robbery were sanguine of success, and hoped to bag their game at once, but a day's ride through the mountains convinced them that only by cunning could they be caught. While they admit this thing, they are apparently taking kindly the theory that at least a portion of the band of robbers live within a short distance where the robbery took place.

An Interesting Discovery.

Denver, Sept. 3.—Dr. C. L. Sleich of this city has made an interesting discovery. He is conducting experiments with a view to determining how weak a solution of cocaine will prove efficacious as a local anesthetic in minor surgical operations, when he accidentally discovered that simple water injected under the skin with a syringe renders the flesh at the point insensible to pain. The effect of the water is to create a slight swelling resembling that caused by the sting of a bee. The space marked by the swelling is insensible for some minutes so that incisions can be made without causing pain. The method of procedure is very simple. The skin at the point where injection is to be made is first made tense and the point of a Pravaz syringe filled with distilled water is inserted. The syringe is slowly emptied and a white blister appears. The size of the swelling will depend on the amount of water used. A half minute after the syringe is withdrawn the space is distinctly marked by the blister is insensible, and can be cut into without causing pain. The pain caused by the insertion of the syringe can be at once allayed by spraying with [illegible]

If this much practical worth to surgery this discovery will prove cannot yet be determined. Mr. Sleich made use of it in the case of a huge carbuncle in the thigh. After the injection of water the doctor laid the carbuncle bare by cross incisions eight centimeters in length, and took out the dead tissue, the patient declaring that the operation caused him slight pain. The treatment had no effect on the healing of the wounds. In the case mentioned, the cure immediately commenced and healed perfectly.

Meet for Sacrifice.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 3.—The ticket nominated by the Democratic convention last week was: For Auditor-general, Robert E. Cooper of Allentown; for State-treasurer, [illegible] Tilden of Erie.

THE PLATFORM.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 3.—First—We, the representatives of the Democracy of Pennsylvania in convention assembled renew our pledge of devotion to the principles of our party as the country at large as declared in the platform of the national conventions of 1840 and 1844 and approved in the election of [illegible] by a majority of the American people. We are, as we have always been, in favor of honest and economical administration of public affairs, of limiting expenses and reducing taxation to meet the actual necessities of the government; of a sound and stable currency based on gold and silver, and regulated in such proportions as will keep it on a parity; of a reform and revision of the tariff, of liberal but just pensions, and of all well considered legislation tending to increase the rewards and dignify the burdens of labor.

Second—We realize and affirm that the election of 1891, in Pennsylvania, involves no issue of federal politics, and we appeal to honest and patriotic citizens irrespective of past party affiliations to unite in vindicating the honor of this commonwealth and redeeming the fiscal and auditing departments of its government from official abuses and corrupt practices.

Third—We arraign and condemn the Republican legislature for having refused to enforce the constitution by appropriate legislation; for having failed to pass honest and equitable apportionment bills as required by the constitution; for having ignored the demands of labor for relief by law; for having denied the righteous popular demand for such laws as would distribute the burdens of public taxation equally upon all classes of property and for having refused to reform long existing abuses in the mercantile appraisement laws as recommended by the Democratic executive of 1885.

Fourth—We arraign and condemn the Republican legislature for the enactment of vexatious, oppressive and vicious legislation, against which the executive veto was interposed for the protection of the people.

Fifth—We arraign and condemn the Republican party of Pennsylvania for electing men to state and municipal offices, by whose neglect of duty, complicity in fraud and plunder of the public treasury, a million and a half dollars of the people's money have been stolen and squandered.

Sixth—We sympathize with the just demands of workingmen for such legislation as will protect their interests and for such speedy amendment of the constitution as will guarantee them a secret and honest ballot.

Seventh—We oppose the repeal of the mercantile taxes and insist that they shall be fairly and equitably laid, honestly collected and that the money arising from them shall be [illegible] the state treasury and not stolen by its agents.

Eighth—We favor the repeal of such provisions of law as require advertisement of [illegible] taxes and the uncertain cost of collection where there can be no recovery. We favor the abolition of the office of mercantile appraiser and the substitution of some certain, economical and expeditious methods of assessing and collecting those taxes.

BASE BALL.

Western Association.

DENVER OMAHA.

Omaha, Sept. 3. Worth's three-bagger in the eighth, followed by Brennan's single, earned the only run made in to-day's game. Both stein and Kennedy pitched good ball and the work of the fielders was sharp at all times. Denver's three errors were not costly. The feature of the game was the long throw of Dungan from deep water to first, putting out Sprague. Score:

Earned runs—Denver 1.
Two-base hits—O'Connor.
Three-base hits—Worick.
Double plays—Dungan to Flanegan; Smith to Day to Flanegan.
First base on balls—Stein 1, Kennedy 2.
Passed balls—Hutchinson 1.
Time—1:30.
Umpire—Gaffney.

SIOUX CITY OMAHA.

Sioux City, Sept. 3. The game to-day was all against Sioux City until the last half of the ninth when they batted in and pounded Pears for five runs. Owing to a peculiar whitish cast sky good fielding was impossible. Score: Sioux City 8, Kansas City 7.

National League.

Chicago, Sept. 3. Griffith and Pietz held up the slugging Philadelphians and their support behind the bat was excellent, Clarkson being the victim to-day. Mike Kelly managed to play through the inning after which he retired in favor of Wood. Langdon, though he found batting all right, was unable to get to first base. All trying, however, to steal the second. Wood failed and was caught to center field and Long came in to take Irwin's place at short. Hutchinson could not be found for safe hits but three runs were [illegible] him was earned without an error. John Clarkson was in good form, but lacked excellent support. Score: Chicago 10, Boston 1.

New York vs. Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 3.—By using three pitchers and by heavy and steady batting the New Yorks won to-day's game. They also played well in the field. John Ewing began the batting for the visitors, but his delivery was so slow that it was thought advisable to have young Clarkson to relieve him after one inning had been played. Clarkson started off well but began to weaken after his second inning and so he kept until the sixth, when Rusie was put in and finished the game. Gruber played an easy game for the New York lads from the start. Score: New York 7, Cleveland 4.

Cincinnati vs. Philadelphia.

Cincinnati, Sept. 3. Harry Wright's men jumped all over Mullane to-day. The small crowd present had a notion that the Quakers were the only men on the field until the eighth inning, when the Reds began to pay their compliments to King Kelly. But the visitors were too far ahead to overtake them. Though Harry Wright put Jim Keefe in to pitch the one remaining inning. The game was played between light showers and under a cloudy sky. Score: Philadelphia 13, Cincinnati 8.

Testing the Mortars.

Sandy Hook, N. J., Sept. 3. Officials of the United States government under command of Captain Heath tested another of the breech-loading steel mortars. With a charge of sixty-one pounds of powder a four and a half inch solid steel plate set into the ground at an angle of sixty-five degrees, 165 feet from the mortar was smashed into fragments. The powder, which was made at the Bethlehem, Pa., works for the purpose of testing its piercing qualities, weighed 628 pounds and was split almost in half. The test proved that a shell from the mortar could penetrate the deck armor of any war vessel afloat at a distance of six miles. The velocity of the projectile fired to-day was 878 feet a second. The mortars are manufactured at the Watervliet, Va., arsenal.

Wheat From Oklahoma.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Twenty gaily decorated freight cars carrying 25,000 bushels of wheat, not to mention a lot of watermelons, arrived here from Oklahoma yesterday. The consignment was sent here by the Guthrie board of trade as an advertisement. The wheat is of a very high grade.

He Saw the Messiah.

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 3.—Old Crow, the Cheyenne chief who went to Pine Ridge agency a few weeks ago in search of the Messiah returned yesterday and is now encamped a little south of here. He says he saw Christ. Old Crow also visited Walker's Lake, at which place he saw thousands of Indians who also saw the resuscitated Children of Christ. He reports all the Indians in that region as dancing, and declares that he will return to Walker's Lake in a week or two and persuade Christ to come here with him.

His influence with the Indians is rapidly increasing and he now has a large number of followers.

VICTORY COMPLETE.

Millions of Balmaceda's Escape Quickly Dispersed.

REMAINING SHIPS SURRENDER.

In Consequence of the Reported Shooting of Balmaceda the United States Ready to Recognize the New Government.

New York, Sept. 3. The Herald's Callao, Peru, special says: The torpedo boat Almirante Condell and the armed transport Imperial, the last armed forces loyal to the late President Balmaceda of Chili, were formally surrendered to the Chilian minister here to-day.

The Condell and Imperial steamed into port this morning and for the first time heard of the defeat of the Balmacedists at Valparaiso, the flight of Balmaceda, the fall of Santiago and the complete triumph of the junta.

Captain Morgan had been particularly active at sea against the revolutionists and felt that it would be hardly safe for him to return to Chili. After consultation with the Chilian minister he decided to formally hand over the two ships to that official as the representative of the nation.

BALMACEDA'S DEATH.

A special to the Herald from Valparaiso says: I have investigated the report of the killing of Balmaceda, no such report has been heard here, so far as I can ascertain, and nothing is known of the fugitive since he left Los Andes. The probabilities are very strongly against the story being true, for if Balmaceda had been killed it is long odds that the members of the Junta would have heard of it.

The steamer Arequipa arrived at Valparaiso from Iquique last evening with Senor Waldo, vice-president of the senate, Senor Errazuris, the provisional minister of foreign affairs, and other prominent Congressional leaders aboard.

The question of the disposition of the refugees had been definitely settled, and to-morrow the U. S. S. Baltimore, and a German man of war will leave for Peru with all of the refugees.

A short conference was held aboard the Admiral Brown's flagship, the San Francisco, last night, and the question as to who should and who should not receive guarantees was discussed.

The German and American admirals worked through their respective ministers at Santiago and were informed by them that the junta would not give any guarantees as to the recent president, C. Viveas, Senor Pandon, Viel, Godoy, Monet, Fuentes, Senor Salvador, Colonel Pandon, the chief of the police were kept under advisement until this morning, when the ministers were informed that no guarantees would be given. When this was received it was decided to send the two men of war to the north.

The American and German war ships are closely watched by the authorities, and this may have given rise to the talk in foreign circles that an attempt might be made to prevent the sailing of the vessels and to take the refugees away by force. There is surely not, so far as I can learn, to believe that any such step is contemplated.

All the foreign residents of the city are overjoyed and delighted men, and will have to leave the country if they can. This is particularly the case in regard to Major Rivera, who was Intendente Valparaiso, and many of The Polecats, and Senor Edwards. They probably will not let in that order if failed.

Inauguration Day Cards.

Washington, Sept. 3. Admiral Brown's call-down to the navy department issued this morning announcing the complete success of the Junta was communicated immediately to Mr. Wharton, the acting secretary of state. While Admiral Brown in his diplomatic representative of the government, his statement of facts is taken as an addition to the official information before the department of state in the case. The recognition of diplomatic practice having been so far met, it is probable that the department of state will now proceed to take official cognizance of the state of affairs in Chili as modified by Balmaceda's resignation of the victory of the Congressional party.

At the department it is said there has been no change in the complexion which it still has been the policy of the government has been to avoid the encouragement or premature acquisition of revolutionary movements, particularly in the case of the unsettled republics of the Australian hemisphere, and in the exceptional cases in which departures have been made from that practice the result has not always been satisfactory, so in the case of the Chilian Congressional movement the department of state has confined itself, the officials say, to strict observance of the practice of this government as fixed by many precedents, and has awaited the receipt of the official information necessary for it to know beyond a doubt that the Congressionalists have succeeded in securing absolute domain over Chili. The requisite information is probably now before the department, and the next step is recognition.

Several cablegrams have been sent to Minister Egan and there is reason to believe that when he is satisfied that a government has been (even though it be temporary in form) universally established in Chili he will immediately open official intercourse with that government. This step, it is said at the department, is equivalent to according a minister to the new government, and as soon as such new government officially notifies the department of state that it has ordered its special envoys to represent it regularly in the United States, Dr. Montt and his colleagues will be recognized at the department of state.

The New In Chili.

Washington, D. C., September 3.—The assumption of government by the junta of Chilian Congressional party announced in the dispatches received this afternoon by the envoys of the Congressional party in this city will result in the recognition of the new government by the United States within a period much shorter than has been supposed.

Until this recognition is given, however, Mr. Egan will still continue as minister to Chili, unless the demands of the Congressionalists prove strong enough to oblige Secretary Blaine to recall him. Following diplomatic usage in parallel cases the state department will not recognize the new government until its claims and availability for recognition have been reported on by some representative of the department (Mr. Egan in this instance) of until the new government officially notifies this country of its formation and asks that its minister be received at Washington.

There is hardly a doubt that Minister Egan has directed by the state department to report on the standing of the Congressionalist government. This report will probably be long, and if it is Mr. Egan will send it by mail, unless the department deems the matter of such immediate importance to report by the telegraph. In this case Mr. Egan will probably send a short summary of his views by wire, after which will say the department already knows from Mr. Egan's letter and dispatch of Tuesday stating that the Congressionalists were fully in power, but diplomacy is supposed to have said information as to which can be done until some official report is received.

If on the other hand the new government decides to show its claims for recognition by appointing a minister to this country to succeed Balmaceda's envoy, Lazcano, Mr. Egan will be the proper channel through which this request should be sent to the state department; but there is strong reason for believing from Diplomatic Minister of the Congressional envoys in this city that Mr. Egan's offices in this case will not be solicited, the new government preferring to deal directly with Secretary Blaine.

BALMACEDA'S SUICIDE.

London, Sept. 3.—A letter from an officer of an English war ship at Valparaiso asserted that Balmaceda shot and quarrelled with the American Minister Patrick Egan and the French minister; that the latter refused to accept an apology, but that Minister Egan renewed his relations with the government under threats from Senor Godoy that if Mr. Egan gave Balmaceda trouble they would send him aboard of English war ships.

New York Stock Market.

New York, Sept. 3.—London selling this morning caused prices to open fractionally lower, and during the forenoon there was a [illegible] of sales, both to realize profits and for the short account. Union Pacific [illegible] supplied, as usual, the disturbing factor in the market, their stock fluctuated widely. In the early dealings it sold down 1¾ to 82¾, partly recovered and went off to the lowest point by noon. St. Paul, Atchison and Burlington were the next most [illegible] Chesapeake and Ohio stocks were notable exceptions to the general market. The common advanced 1 per cent, the first preferred 2½ and the second preferred 2½. The general market was irregular throughout, and at noon figures were down ¼ to 1 per cent. from those of yesterday.

One of the rumors in circulation during the morning came from Chicago and was to the effect that Union Pacific was about to be placed in the hands of a receiver. This was [illegible] officially denied. After 12 o'clock there was a slight rally, but during the afternoon the bears made a [illegible] demonstration against prices which was followed by sharp declines throughout the list. The Granger stocks were made the principal objects of attack. While the Grangers supplied the bulk of the afternoon trading, the bears met with some success in selling down New England, Canada Southern and Louisville and Nashville. In Union Pacific on the contrary, there were signs all through the afternoon of buying on the decline to cover [illegible] The stock recovered most of the early decline. There was some covering in the general market in final dealings which resulted in a slight rally. The closing prices as a rule were ¼ to 1½ per cent. below those of yesterday. Total sales, 367,358 shares.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

Statistics in Regard to the Work of the Public Schools for the Past Year.

Mr. Rowland Bonny, county superintendent of schools, has now completed his annual report for the school year just past.

The report makes a good showing for the year, and gives some interesting details in regard to the work that has been done.

The school work in El Paso county during the past year has been satisfying and satisfactory, and there has been a marked improvement both as to progress made and the quality of the instruction. This [illegible] been a beautiful [illegible] the county, and the co-operation of teachers and school boards, and by the efficiency of these boards in furnishing [illegible] supplies and school buildings.

Something of the marked growth of public schools for the last four years can be given by the fact that four years ago [illegible] that were children of school [illegible] the school districts. Now there are 4900, and the [illegible] to fifty-five.

In the report for the last two years printed in part here, it will be seen that the amount of the general fund collected for the past [illegible] considerably below that collected for the preceding year. The [illegible] of the small size of last year's fund is owing to the fact that the taxes were not collected so as to come into the fund during the last fiscal year. This uncollected money will help to swell this school year's collection because of the delay in receiving it.

It will be seen that the amount received from fines in the county for 1890 is $1,831 while that of 1891 is but $444. In 1890 the district attorney brought twenty-six suits against the gamblers and liquor dealers of Colorado City, Manitou and elsewhere. The year realized from the fines so secured also the collection of 1891 to make a large sum.

Following are the more important movements of the report of the year 1891 and a comparison with those given in that of the year preceding:

MELON DAY.

The Great Event Marked by Many Features Yesterday.

10,000 MELONS ARE EATEN.

And a Good Time Is Had by All—Many Visitors From Other Points—Pike's Peak Sketch of the Town and Vicinity—A Landlord Promises.

Rocky Ford, Sept. 3.—The Fifth annual celebration of Watermelon day was attended by between five and six thousand people, the largest crowd ever held. The weather was fine. There were six special trains of forty coaches over the Santa Fe to carry people from adjoining towns, in addition to the regular service. Eight or nine bands of music furnished abundant music, while the [illegible] were occupied by speeches by the governor and other prominent persons.

The exercises have been held in the same grove for the past three years. Ten thousand melons formed a pile which was free to all and nearly all of them had disappeared at 4 p. m.

The agricultural and horticultural exhibits were fine. Other counties in the Arkansas valley applied for space for exhibits and this may lead to establishing a permanent fair for this valley.

The governor and staff arrived in a special sleeper early in the day and took a carriage drive through the surrounding country.

The number of melons raised is double what it was last year. The supply is increasing as growers learn better how to handle them to advantage. Several parties who are leaving land here say that it pays them at the rate of $120 raising melons.

Yesterday was Watermelon day at Rocky Ford and quite a number went from this city. Rocky Ford is [illegible] located, in the county of Otero, Colo., 170 miles southeast of Denver, on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad, and about one mile south of the Arkansas river.

The Arkansas valley at this point is nearly 1000 feet the lowest part of Colorado. For many a mile east and west along the railroad soil settled and [illegible] and [illegible] following the Arkansas river. Beyond the [illegible] the vice other valleys are found equally rich and now largely under rushing water ways, bringing life and wealth to every acre within its beneficent reach.

Six years ago from La Junta to Pueblo was an unmarked waste, only inhabited by the coyotes, prairie dogs, bighorned cattle and the equally wild cowboy. Now, as far as the eye can reach, vast fields of golden alfalfa, golden wheat, oats, etc., are seen. Houses are springing up, neat farm houses, surrounded by groves, ever grateful to the traveler's eye, and a village already resembling the entire locale in size.

Up to the present year, this lovely valley could boast but one town, the Rocky Ford of the Now four much more extensive is this, whether the water of the mountains for many miles north and south of the [illegible] pouring up hundreds of thousands of acres to [illegible] Inland empire, is [illegible] The first year for the farmers of the upper Arkansas. What but the very glorious melon could inspire such divine affatus, or such an overwhelming attack of—colic.

The advent of September broke unusually [illegible] upon the inhabitants of this favored locality, whereas a storm the night before had cooled the before heated air. But despite the cold, confident in the nearly eternal sunshine of Colorado, the melons commenced coming in early. Wagon-load after wagon-load, piled to the brim, were delivered as fast as a half dozen men could [illegible] them up. The keepers kept the heaps higher and higher until the melon fed [illegible] by nightfall a perfect mountain of the luscious fruit could be seen from afar against the [illegible] globes, over 10,000 in number.

In 1890, the census was considered at 5,000. At noon today citizens estimated that nearly double the last year crowd was on the ground.

It was an amusing scene to see ten thousand mouths, all engaged on enormous slices of [illegible] melon, the red juice running in streams, till the ground around looked as if lately irrigated.

The day broke just cool enough to be delightful. The cool day before and the still cooler night had chilled the melons to a delicious temperature.

Surely this is melon day! Melons in the park by the acre, melons on the street, melons in stores, restaurants, saloons and hotels. Everybody eating and drinking melons, and all live as one should.

The felicity of a big, fat Denver "colored gentleman" was a sight to delight the gods. He had a two-foot melon in his hand out of which he was cutting vast moon-like slices. By some "de-relish cantrip slight" he managed to stretch his mouth to the same dimensions as the piece of melon he held, and with one great slobbering scoop, he took in the whole juicy slice, leaving nothing but the crescent rind. It was a sight to drive a fellow African spectator mad with envy. In pure admiration, two boys were [illegible] under the Denver darkey, thinking in this way to fill him up. With consideration running in streams from their faces, the boys rushed from the melon pile to the darkey. This was at 10 o'clock a.m. On returning from dinner we found the boys [illegible] out in the shade completely worn out, while the darkey with [illegible] and wreathed countenance was mumbling [illegible] he "couldn't git any mo' melon, Foblin' a-mean, dough sere, an' dey can't git melon 'nuf to set fer inards." A wee lad [illegible] hugely brought the darkey placed at the end, and then he actually smiled. And what a smile! The very melons turned pale. At sundown he found buried several feet in melon rinds sound asleep. For once he had his fill of melon.

At between 5 and 6 o'clock p. m. the trains began pulling away from the scene of the festival, and as darkness set in the little town once more sank into its usual stillness.

The melon has had its day (the only complaint [illegible] and Rocky Ford is covered [illegible] with glory. See [illegible] Pay [illegible] Junction!

Fifty-second Congress.

Lodging, Sept. 3.—The Standard referring to the message of 1850 asks France whether in seeking a military alliance with Russia, which she admits is the only interpretation of the re-appropriation, she intends to throw away the lesson of Sedan.

The Times says: The dispersion of the Balkan cloud is a welcome relief. The meeting of the German and Austrian emperors will now be merely congratulatory. European peace is not likely to be destroyed at present.

The American hog has no wings, but with some delay, he arrives.

The control of the elements has always been a desire of mankind. The power of governing in the rain, chilly and lonesome as a Prohibitionist on election day, did not offer the first prayer, it is true, but ever since prayers for weather of various kinds have been as common as weeds along the irrigation ditches. The importance of the subject was well known to the Greeks, who assigned the weather bureau to Jupiter the W. M. G. O. of all gods, who distributed areas of high pressure and phenomena, barographs and crop reports from the summit of Olympus. It is very much to the credit of the signal service of late years that it is as impartial as the Greeks ascribe to the Olympian wielding its rain upon punsters and English tourists with equal impartiality. But the Grecian Greely was not so fair, and it soon became whispered abroad that certain persons would like Washington Olympian attaches to become influence with the administration for a consideration, and also for a consideration, produce a result with the accuracy of the Greek. Since then the weather department of every well regulated Olympus, prophet, sooth-sayer, vates, augur or Voudou has been as the Prince of Wales said about his baccarat chips, quite indispensable. Like an Alliance candidate for congress, they usually took money from both sides so no how who does, during all these years, until Melbourne came. Melbourne is peculiar. He is like the Broadmoor Casino, first and only in his city and defies competition. He is a gorgeous and splendid affair. He is a gorgeous and splendid affair. He does not rely on birds or tornadoes nor is he like Wheeler or Foster or anybody else. He knows his methods and the Duke of Sutherland got who said he fully as a dead shot got who came as near exploding it as anyone. But there is nothing like it in Dublin or Melbourne. A thing that is Dublin or Melbourne is not to be thought of. It is yet a little cloudy so to speak, but it is likely to be more than a little cloudy before Mr. Melbourne is through with it. Mr. Melbourne has settled the Manitou hotel runners, his objection side. Briefly the trouble with Mr. Melbourne is this: The gentleman who have hay want drying weather, the stockmen want a little more rain to start the grass, the potatoman want enough to keep things going, and the apple man would like to have the apples mature and the cherry men have enough of all three. Next plenty in the mountains and none on the plains, are my last. A compromise was just reached to have it rain on Sunday while the churches were asleep and the cowboys were in bed getting their pajamas, when Rev. Dr. [illegible] of the church of Christ, Mr. Melbourne that he can get a fortune by guaranteeing eighteen inches of rain through July and August, but before the rain will begin [illegible] Manitou belle. The farmers will want [illegible] and the stockman will want [illegible] everyone in town whose occupation has been interrupted or property spoiled will want damages to say nothing of the injury done to the climate. An unusual fall weather fairly investigable, but a successful one is demoralizing in the highest degree. Before the people get through with Mr. Melbourne he would not produce a rain storm if the commissioners should offer a reward for it.

THE IRRIGATION CONVENTION.

Irrigation is old, many thousands of years probably, but it is comparatively new to America. It might reasonably have been expected that these people, who have never been satisfied to do anything as well as other people, or until they had found some improvement, would not rest contented with the irrigation methods which prevailed in ancient Assyria and Egypt and which have been slavishly copied by other nations down to the present time. The expected has happened, and during the last ten years especially, there has arisen a great deal of information on this subject which never existed before, and besides the practical use of water in quantity and time to the best advantage, as regards the technical engineering questions of supply and distribution, and as regards the legal system by which individual rights and the common benefit may best be secured.

So rapid has been the development that it is difficult, if not impossible, for anyone to know just what is being or has been accomplished. Individuals, associations, states have experimented independently, and each one apparently has no teacher but experience.

The ignorance of the principles of this subject so important to the people of the United States operates also to their injury in the matter of such national legislation as is necessary for the settlement and cultivation of such lands as can be reclaimed by irrigation. The general land laws now existing were planned for the prairies and for the plains and mountains, and by legislators, who, it may be supposed, never grew an irrigated crop. The desert land act, which is intended in some measure to supply the recognized deficiencies of the laws, is notoriously inadequate, and has led to many ways open for much fraud and appropriation of the public domain.

The Irrigation convention, which is to meet in Salt Lake City on the 15th, 16th and 17th of September, and which has been the subject of much discussion in the columns of the Salt Lake Tribune, is the first attempt to bring the subject before the people in a practical way. The call for the convention is as follows:

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, AUG. 24, 1878.

To the Mayors of Cities, Presidents of Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Agriculture, Horticultural and Mechanical Fairs and Scientific Societies throughout the States and Territories west of the Missouri river:

GENTLEMEN: On account of the vast and growing importance of the subject of irrigation and the arid lands, which form the basis of it, the new states of the growing west, it has been deemed necessary that the proper information be collected and sufficient influence brought to bear, with a view to obtaining just and much-needed legislation upon the subject.

The sole purpose, of calling this congress is to induce the national and state governments to enact laws, whereby these arid lands can be best and quickest brought into the market, settled and developed. Without offering any suggestion whatever as to the plan to be pursued, or the legislation to be augmented, each delegate is requested to form feasible legislation calculated to bring about the development and up-building of the agricultural lands of the western States and territories.

Having the idea in its nicks, Governor Arthur L. Thomas of Utah, in conjunction with the Salt Lake chamber of commerce, has issued the call for the irrigation congress, to be held in Salt Lake City, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 15th, 16th and 17th, 1878.

Governor Thomas has requested each governor west of the Missouri river to appoint thirty delegates at large from his respective state, and the chamber of commerce, through its general committee of arrangements, issues this call to those addressed as above indicated.

The basis of representation is as follows: Each mayor, or each president or head official of the various organizations above named, is requested to appoint five delegates in addition to himself, to represent his city or organization in the congress, to be the sixth delegate, and ex-officio chairman of his delegation.

Mayors, presidents of organizations, etc., are hereby requested to fill out, with the proper names and address, etc., the papers contained in the enclosed envelope and forward one act to each person selected as a delegate, at the same time requesting each delegate to promptly notify him of his acceptance or non-acceptance of his appointment, and at the same time to forward one act to him and at the same time to the secretary of the irrigation congress, of his acceptance or non-acceptance.

The mayor of [illegible] making such appointment is further requested to immediately send to the secretary of the irrigation congress a full list of the names and addresses of such delegates as he has selected and in case any delegate declines, to promptly appoint a substitute, notifying the secretary of the latter's appointment.

N. B.—Particular attention is requested to the time limit for [illegible] that the time is short at best and delays will be very inconvenient.

A. L. THOMAS, Governor of Utah.
GEO. M. SCOTT, Mayor of Salt Lake.

THEY COULD ESCAPE — Many.

A lot of young traveling [illegible] recently located at a [illegible] hotel Sunday got up a conspiracy against the landlord. Everything about the hotel was [illegible] perfection itself. The cookery was [illegible] the table was [illegible] with the supplies of the best [illegible] all that could be desired, and the choice [illegible] but the wild young men, [illegible] proprietor's life miserable for one day by kicking individually and collectively against everything.

Before they proceeded to carry the plot into execution the ringleader of the conspirators decided to take into their confidence a young man of lingering exterior and much diffidence, who had just arrived and was in the act of registering.

"You're a traveling man, aren't you?" asked in a low tone.

"Yes."

"Well, there's about a dozen of us here, and we're putting up a job on the landlord. We are going to kick at every blessed thing [illegible]—coffee, steak, biscuit, pastry, fruits, [illegible], waitress, scenery, rooms, general accommodations—and all. We'll be glad to have you take a hand in it. If you are in for a little fun."

"If fun is for a little fun!" echoed the new arrival. "Thunder! I'm traveling for a [illegible] horse, with headquarters in N. York. I always kick." Chicago Tribune.

HOW THE PARROT WAS REFORMED.

The wickedness of a small parrot is important of it not worth [illegible]. Not many cases require reform; but one did. His cage hung in front of a canal store, and by a connection the bird could [illegible] in a manner to make an ordinary person's feathers stand up with horror. And as swearing is or used to be the chief part of a canal driver's language, nobody could tell whether the parrot or a driver was talking.

One day a boat stopped at the store and the entire crew, including the driver, went into the building and staid a long time. This was the parrot's opportunity. The boat horses were left unattended; so he proceeded to attend to them.

"Back!" he commanded, with much swearing.

The horses promptly obeyed the familiar order.

"Back!" he screamed again, much encouraged.

They obeyed again, and yet again. And he kept on swearing and yelling "Back!" until at last the horses tumbled into the canal and were drowned.

The parrot laughed a little, but not much, over the success of his efforts. And it was noticed that he never swore after that melancholy affair.

The lesson was that the driver wrung his neck. Sparks in Life.

PECULIAR RECESSES IN ENGLISH CHURCHES.

There is an item that is rarely met with that would be, probably, a puzzle to most persons who looked at it without a key of explanation as to its use. This is a tall, long, narrow recess in the wall, low down toward the ground, near the altar. It is supposed to be intended for the reception of a processional staff, too long to be placed with other treasures in the [illegible] or elsewhere. Another somewhat recess has been observed, in a few instances, near the ground, to the east of the piscina, the use of which has not been handed down.

There are at least three churches, too, that have a peculiar niche or recess, partaking somewhat of the character of two piscinas, one above the other, the meaning of which has also passed out of knowledge. These churches are at Southwick, in Sussex, and Boreham and Fletchingley, in Surrey. Gentleman's Magazine.

THE RULING PASSION.

A woman in a telegraph office is almost as much out of her element as she is at a teller's window in a bank, or as a lad at a dry goods store. A young lady of this town tried to send a telegram to a fellow who she expected to visit her, and on the blank wrote, "Come this week, and stay as long as you can." She carefully underscored the words "wanted emphasized and completely [illegible] in the [illegible] to the [illegible].

W. D. HOWELLS AT HOME

BOSTON CLAIMS HIM, THOUGH HE IS NOT A CONSTANT RESIDENT.

How He Was Welcomed Into the World of Literary Workmen by Towers, Holmes and Fields—His Cultivated Wife and the Charming Atmosphere of Their Abode.

[Special Correspondence.]

BOSTON, [illegible], 1878.—Mr. Howells, with or without her Howells, wears its rue with a difference. His residence here has been intermittent in its periods, though fancy from the day that he arrived here on what may well be termed a peace pilgrimage, to the present time. It must have been some time early in the sixties that William Dean Howells entered the life of the modern Athens. He had started out on a journey—not only from Ohio to Massachusetts, but from [illegible] but that journey never to end. It is the unfailing law of life from which one may learn, but still never go back. It is the unfailing law of evolution, of progress, of the eternal forces, that [illegible] on.

The young visitor had grown, however, in to the [illegible] of six poems, which had appeared in The Atlantic Monthly. At twenty-three he was standing, half unconsciously, on the threshold of his kingdom, but the literary tribunal that had pledged him its recognition of his power, their convictions that he had a future, could yet have little divulged that in the young poet there was that latent power which should enter into and transform American literature.

Yet—such is the power of the unconscious in life to [illegible] its destiny and fitting form to—this new era of literary activity was appropriately ushered in. Mr. Lowell gave a dinner in honor of the young poet, at which Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, and James T. Fields were the other two guests, and it was [illegible] that the distinguished host remarked:

"This is the laying on of hands; it is a literary apostolic succession."

As a pictorial hour this is ripe to live in literary history. Out of ways simple and quiet [illegible] comes a country home of refined sweetness and simplicity; from this, thrilled by the unconscious dragon of genius, he had come into that light of the [illegible] which alone tests the stamina. Then the gentle life of Mr. Howells had [illegible] that of high thinking and plain living. It seems to have been a home furnished with ideals if not with bric-a-brac and virtu, and an imaginative atmosphere is more stimulating than any costly objects [illegible].

Within a few years after Mr. Howells' arrival to this city he received the appointment of consul to Venice. Going abroad, he met a beautiful and graceful woman, Miss Elinor Mead, a sister of the well-known sculptor, Larkin K. Mead, and they were married and [illegible] went to Venice, where they set up housekeeping in a doge's palace, and lived in an [illegible].

Mr. Howells took for his study a room at the back of the many roomed apartment, where two sunny windows look out over the south, taking in at near [illegible] the "grand Arch of [illegible], and after the dreamy blue days of the Brooklyne hills he does his work largely in the mornings, and in the afternoons and evenings during the season he is apt to be somewhere on evidence at receptions and dances or in his walks and rides.

Mr. Howells is most interesting in conversation, and he replies simply and freely to all questions regarding his literary aims and convictions. He is intensely modern; he is a very earnest student of conditions and their tendencies; he looks into life on every side, and his novels are thus forming a gallery of portraiture which will, if we mistake not, embody the comedic humanity of America.

THOMAS HOWARD.

The genius of Mr. Howells is as sympathetically comprehensive as it is accurate, and whether he writes [illegible] of society, it is always with the soul of the poet and with the heart of a philosopher. He unites the critical acumen of human nature and the polished ease of society.

LILIAN WHITING.

A ROUND MILLION.

The Rival California Proposes to Spend on the World's Fair.

[Special Correspondence.]

SAN FRANCISCO, [illegible], 1878.—San Francisco is energetic always to the forefront, always outgeneralship, while at the same time prudent and conservative, always typical Americans, the people of the Pacific coast are doing their share toward the success of the Columbian exposition. In fact, it might be said in a genuine degree of truth that they are doing something more than their share, for according to the figures brought back by tourists who have recently traversed every section of the state, the interest that is being manifested in the country around about the Golden Gate exceeds that of any other section of the commonwealth of Illinois—the commonwealth having the enterprise, outside of Chicago.

The other evening the big freight elevator in the Rand McNally building came down loaded to its full capacity with packages, small and large. "That is an indication of what California is doing," said one of the members of the department of promotion and publicity. "Every one of those bundles contain World's fair literature, and each one goes out in response to requests. What is more, it is the third consignment of the kind that has gone out within two weeks, that will indicate what the Californians are doing."

Nor does the interest and determination appear to be confined to one particular class. Everybody is determined that California's display shall be worthy of her name and her fame. Capitalists and artisans, agriculturists and tradesmen have united in putting their shoulders to the wheel. At the recent industrial exposition in the Mechanics' Institute "missionary work" on a large scale was accomplished, and tens of thousands of people from all parts of the state were enjoined to enter the ranks and to see to it that their respective counties should do credit to themselves. Enthusiastic [illegible] are the general [illegible] in cities [illegible] and in country towns. Nearly all of them proudly display in a conspicuous position the beautiful lithograph in colors of Mechlin's shall which was recently issued by the directory. While at the same time a good supply of World's fair literature is to be found along with their [illegible].

Nor will there be any lack of the something needful for California's display. When the legislative committee on appropriations get together with the [illegible] commissioners from this state and the public spirited citizens who thus early seek alive to the necessities of the occasion, a good deal of consideration was devoted to the question as to how much of a strain the [illegible] of the Golden State can bear, perhaps, as stated in the language of Commissioner McDonald: "You see, we agreed that the legislature should first appropriate the sum of $500,000. Then, if our people came up with their products, at the next session of the legislature we would ask for $500,000 more, making a round half million upon which we could safely reckon. In addition to this we secured an amendment to the county government law, which each county was given the right to make an appropriation if it was so desired. Before this, you see, we had a law which tended to prevent any such action, but by the amendment in question each county is permitted to vote any sum within its means for the proper representation of such county at the World's fair, but for that purpose only. Quite a number have already availed to put up $5,000 each, and it is thought that from this source we are certain to get anywhere from $150,000 to $200,000. Then we propose to go to the great corporations and railroads, and if we can get $100,000 out of them we will [illegible] to do it—we shall have a total of a million dollars." How is that for the Golden State?

The work is being done, moreover, in a systematic manner. There is nothing of the scuttle in the [illegible] Every county has its own organization, with a full set of officers, and the secretary of each reports to the state commission, which holds weekly meetings in San Francisco. California, moreover, has the honor of being the first state to have a magazine in the interest of the enterprise. The first issue of "The California World's Fair Magazine, devoted to the advancement of California's interests at the World's fair," and an excellently printed affair of a hundred pages turned up at headquarters the other day, and was perused with [illegible] upon by the heads of the different departments.

Largely due to the indefatigable efforts of Commissioner M. H. De Young, the application for a state building for California was among the first of those filed, and consequently the state was enabled to secure a most advantageous location. This structure will be largely devoted to displays of fruit and other products of the soil, while the manufacturing and similar exhibits will be placed in direct competition with the [illegible] in the same lines displayed in the department buildings by other states and countries instead of being [illegible] in the special building. In this way the Californians will be able to say to the [illegible] to all [illegible] to examine and look on this picture and on that."

HENRY M. HYDE.

Making Perfumes.

Chemistry has found it possible not only to analyse perfumes, that is the [illegible] essential oils, that would seem their final resting place, but to build up substances that have similar odors. Rum ether, the substance to which rum owes its perfume, whose chemical name is too troublesome to give, is a regular article of commerce in Austria. It is made by taking twelve pounds each of sulphuric acid and black oxide of manganese, twenty-six pounds of alcohol, and ten of strong acetic acid. These ingredients are mixed and twelve pints distilled from them.

But yeast of pineapple possesses a delicate odor of pineapple, which, by the addition of wine or potato spirits, may be altered to that of strawberry and raspberry. Nitric ether, fifty grams, acetate of amyl and glycerin, 100 grams each, with one liter of pure alcohol, will imitate the odor of pears; and more complicated compounds imitate the apple.

These are not like the perfumers' imitations—apt combinations of substances whose composition is unknown to him, but absolute buildings up of those subtlest of all things, odors, from substances every one of which the chemist can control and the [illegible] of [illegible] known substances till the [illegible] is reached.—Exchange.

Something for "Home Folks."

WHILE you are living in its magnificent scenery, and in its climate, drinking in its magnificent scenery, and reaping the benefits of life in a model city like Colorado Springs, does it never occur to you that the friends LEFT AT HOME do not half understand what you have and they are missing. Letters filled with descriptions are interesting, but they do not convey the impressions of the life of the people as does a good READABLE PAPER. One dollar and fifty cents will buy the Weekly Gazette mailed to any postoffice in the United States. Why not send it as a complement to your letters?

The Weekly Gazette is SPECIALLY PREPARED for persons living outside of Colorado Springs, and who cannot receive the Daily every morning. It has as large a circulation as any weekly in the county, is handsome typographically, and will make an acceptable present. Subscribe for the WEEKLY GAZETTE! Read the Weekly Gazette; you will find it profitable. Advertise in the Weekly Gazette; you will find it profitable.

MAINE COAST DWELLERS WHO ARE BEHIND THE TIMES

The Fisher Maid of Basket Island and the Discouraged Citizen of 1810 an Hour Natives Who Never Saw a Horse a Railroad Engine or a Brick House

The residents of South Thomaston and the mainland with which Matinicus dwellers rather dislike in the march of progress, and it doesn't require much to stifle them. The other day a steamer passing White Head blew very near the coast from her powerful sounding chime whistle whereat the village was much excited. Men and women and children were positively frightened. A steam yacht in the harbor displayed an electric reflecting light illuminating the sky and land and not a few of the unsophisticated wondered, remembering the mention in this shrieks of the strange steamer coupled the two events and concluded that the universe was about to collapse.

The innocence of these people will not seem so very strange when it is remembered that many if not millions of Monhegan and other coast islands have never seen horse, a train of cars or a brick house never having set foot upon the mainland. There is a man on Monhegan island who knows the Boston and Bangor, the New York and Bangor and all the other steamers that pass the island by sight, but although nearly seventy years old, he has never been on board of any kind of a steam craft, and has not the slightest conception of an engine.

It is not very long since a few dozen of rocky soil in outer Casco bay, known as Basket island was deserted by the only people who ever had the courage to live there, an old fisherman, his wife and daughter. These people lived in an old tumble-down rickery on the little windswept isle and were veritable hermits.

AN UNCULTURED MAID.

The man fished, while his wife and daughter carried on the farming operations which consisted in hartering what little coarse hay the island afforded and carrying it on poles to the cow shed. They had no garden, not even a patch of potatoes, but were merely tolerators of the sea. The wife had not visited the mainland for seventeen years, while the daughter had passed the entire sixteen years of her life on the island, although the city of Portland was almost in sight.

The girl was bright, but untutored, pretty, but miserably clad. She wore no stockings and knew nothing of hats. The only relative she knew of outside the family circle was a half sister, who she had never seen. Her father said that this other daughter lived "out west." She lived in Kennebunkport, York county. This daughter of the sea, much to the surprise of some yachtsmen who once landed on the island, was able to play several popular airs upon an old accordion.

She had picked the music out by ear after hearing it played by the bands of passing excursion steamers. A party of picnickers who landed there found Basket island deserted. The matted grass was alive with field mice, and gulls perched boldly upon the rotting window sills of the old house, while in one corner lay the dilapidated accordion which had long been the chief consolation of the lonely fisher maiden.

There is, perhaps, no more lonely spot on the whole Atlantic coast of the United States than Nigger Haut, which lies far seaward off the entrance to Pemaquid bay. The name given to this island by the early French voyagers is most appropriate, for it looks like a mountain half submerged in the sea. The people are a simple, primitive set, and few of them ever visit the mainland. The island, with its fish and sheep and blueberries, is their world, and within its limited circle they are content.

PICCADILLY.

Some finer specimens of humanity are to be found on Isleau Haut. Not long ago a fishing party went down there on a fishing trip, and after catching enough cod for a chowder went ashore to procure some milk. The fishermen soon fell in with a weather beaten native who was looking after the sheep, and he informed them that they could get plenty of milk, but that they would have to wait until his wife, who had gone blueberrying, returned and milked the cows. The native led the way over rocky paths to a dilapidated cottage, and ushered them into the kitchen to await the return of Mrs. ——.

The floor was scrubbed as white as a new shingle, the stove was brightly polished and a little pot before the window was gay with marigolds and other homely flowers, all three in suit of Maria's patient industry. The lord and master sat himself down upon the doorstep and thus ruminated while he whittled a shingle and sending up clouds of smoke from a short clay pipe.

"Times ain't as they used to be, sir. Here Holt (the native pronunciation). Time was when a man might make a living here. Fishin' was good 'n farmin' could be good, but that's all gone. The Government built a good wharf in this here cove 'n a good fleet er vessels enter here, but that—ll now. My father used ter be in trade here, had a store and ter'd ter'n 'n' sigh almost every—'n' that all gone now. He died 'n' he had been trying to sell his place house, barn, land, cows and all, for he longed to emigrate to Washington state. He wanted $900 for the whole outfit and he stopped smoking long enough to swear a great oath that he would not take a cent less. This man had loafed so long that he had forgotten how to work. He seemed to feel that he'd been cheated—that the world owed him a living but that the Isleau Haut was a poor place in which to collect the debt.—Cor New York Sun.

There are 800,000 more widows than there were in England. In France for every 100 widowers there are 194 widows.

Life Made Comfortable.

Brem. Still living in Jersey, eh? Hustler—Yes, I have no thought of coming back to the city.

Brem—But it must be very inconvenient forty minutes by train and fifty by boat every day, and you've got to catch both right on the minute.

Hustler—That's what I like about it. You see when people buttonhole me and want to talk all I have to do is look at my watch matter something about the time and I get away without any—

Brem—Ha, ha! That's good That—is one of a little thing Saphead was telling last.

Hustler—By the way, it's train time now. Ta ta! New York Weekly.

Running a Train Over A Clay Bank.

Engineer Jack Dorsey pulled out of Gordon's the first fast train that had been fitted up with the new air brake. In his experiences with the new air brake he had found it to have remarkable confidence in himself and in his engine, and so it happened that one day Dolan found himself ordered out on the new car. As he stood on the board to hand the "air wagon," I not "forty miles" and as much more as I could make with safety. I set off my back and pulled her full open out, and I tell you, neighbor, it was turnin 'em when we pulled out over the summit. Will you know that as you go in or out of the woods down by Poplar there are [illegible] a short curve when you strike the level.

"Over against the hill is a big clay bank Jolyn was the pay boss then and he was kind of particular about getting along so I made up my mind to show him what 53 could do. When we pulled up at Gordon's I jumped down to the platform for her [illegible] on her [illegible] got round and when I saw no sign of her up as we got on to turning Then I saw her the grit and strength I had. We were [illegible] up and down out of Gilmore and Pay hill we were doing as many miles as if we were doing a fast freight. Then we struck the level and I let her out for all she was worth. I rang the bell and I whistled for I thought if we weren't to the first [illegible] I rang it in a second. It wasn't any use to jump. Just then we got to the end of the curve and I could see the [illegible] the clay bank where the track comes in. Well off 53 hit it and rail [illegible] went like a stump and the [illegible] I reckon the pay car all smashed to the track guess. I pulled her out once and I [illegible] believe we [illegible] Jolyn was back with [illegible] pay Saturday."—New York Sun.

Many Men Are Always Curious.

Did you ever stop to think what curious things human nature is? I'll give you some food for reflection. Every day on the streets you observe men dashing about as if their very lives depended upon their speed. They rush madly through the throngs and although naturally courteous gentlemen seldom if ever apologize. The same fellows who look as if they were catching trains all over the world serve them when the slightest thing out of the ordinary occurs. They are the very first people to form the crowd. In many cases in big cities crowds that are formed from very often, that would hardly tempt a schoolboy to lift his eyes from his book. I experimented with this phase of human nature the other day.

A man stood on the top of the Times building doing some painting. Now I stood on the top of tall buildings many thousands of times before and nobody ever paused to observe. But I wagered with a friend that I could have a dozen people watching the man in five minutes. I simply stood still and stared. Somebody that was going by with the rapidity of a professional sprinter stood stock still. He was joined in two minutes by half a dozen others and in five minutes a good many over a score had paused to see what the matter was.—Boston Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TWO LOVERS.

Two lovers by a moss-grown spring
They leaned soft cheeks together there,
Mingled the dark and curly hair
And heard the wooing thrushes sing.
O but idling time
Is given a blest prime!

Two cradled from the portal crept
The bell made happy carollings,
The air was soft as fanning wings,
While pensive in the pathway stept
O pure eyed bride!
O tender bride!

Two faces o'er a cradle bent
Two hands above the head were locked
Those pictured each other while they
Thus watched a life which love had sent
O solemn hour!
O hidden power!

Two forms by the evening fire
The red light fell about their knees,
On hands that rose by slow degrees
Like buds upon the lily spire.
O perfect life!
O tender strife!

Two sets of soft gold threads
The red light shone about it everywhere,
But all the heads below were bare
He gone and left the lonely pair
O voyage fast!
O vanished past!

The red light shone about the floor
And made the space between them wide
They drew their chairs up to the side
Each pale cheeks joined and said, "Once more!"
O marvelous!
O poet thrice!
—George Eliot.

A Queer Business.

Mr. Henry Labouchere, of London, tells of an advertisement that appeared recently in one of the London papers which reads as follows:

"Birch Rods—Small and handy in hand, well packed. 16 Weston, cutter of Mrs. Taylor's Hawthorn Terrace, Canterbury."

This was such a struggle advertisement that Mr. Labouchere thought he would inquire into it, and so he sent to Miss Weston a note requesting her to send him a birch rod as advertised, and inclosing the [illegible] shilling. Shortly the rod arrived, and with it a note from Miss Weston to this effect:

"Miss Weston incloses one red birch. It must be tested to water to restore its suppleness, and the handle may be wrapped in ribbon. Miss Weston advertises on a loss, but with a view to restore the rod and reform the present 'untamed' race of English boys and girls."

Just think of it! Making a regular business of selling birch rods to make boys better. How would the boys of this country like that, and would they agree with my informant that this lady is engaged in a great and glorious work?

I am afraid not and I and further am afraid to say that the modern boys who stand in need of the rod are like angels' visits few and far between.—Harper's Young People.

Out of His Way.

Mrs. Gotham—You are going down town are you not?

Mr. Gotham—Yes, my dear.

Mrs. G—Well, I wish you'd drop into Silke, Ribbon & Co.'s on your way and match this.

Mr. G (hurriedly)—I've got to go South, and that will take me some distance from Silke, Ribbon & Co.'s.

Mrs. G—Well Mr. Jones' office is only a short distance from it—I'm quite sure. [illegible] and that will just [illegible] you this and ask

Mr. G (hastily)—After leaving Jones I must see Smith whose in the opposite direction from the latter, you know.

Mrs. G—No matter. Cheape, Bargin & Co will do. They are near Smith's.

Mr. G—But I've got to take a round about way to Smith's in order to get to Brown. Can't pass Cheape, Bargin & Co's, my dear.

Mrs. G (impatiently)—Humph. Where are you going after you leave Smith's?

Mr. G (hastily)—I'm going up in a balloon.—New York Weekly.

Hymns from a Merry-go-Round.

The funniest thing to be found in Prospect park on Sunday is a religious merry-go-round. It is stationed on the hill just back of the Third street entrance and may be heard half a mile away. On week days this organ grinds out "Maggie Murphy's Home," "Comrades" and the song of the Jolly who would whistle and wait for Katie Bright and early on Sunday morning this lively scenes and the organ is loaded up with hymns. During the course of half an hour one Sunday nothing came out of the pipes except "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Hold the Fort, for I Am Coming," "Sweet By and By," "I'll Meet Thee" and "Rock of Ages."—Cor New York Times.

Mr. Fred F. Horn and Mrs. Anna Poss, were married last evening at 20 East St. Vrain street, Rev. Dr. Kirkwood officiating. The ceremony occurred in the presence of a few intimate friends only. Mr. Horn is the well-known jeweler on Pike's Peak avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Horn will be at home at 20 East St. Vrain street after to-day.

Police magistrate Kinsley had three victims before the court yesterday. The first was the darkey named Anderson, who took rather a cowardly part in a row in Moore's billiard hall about a week ago and used a knife to the slight injury of one of his companions. He was fined $10 and costs. A man was brought before the court for using profane language and given a fine of $5.00 and costs. In the afternoon one of the drivers of Civill & White's ice wagons was fined $10 and costs for maltreating one of the horses.

Captain De Courcy brought THE GAZETTE a present from his big ranch yesterday, situated a little over two miles south of town. It consisted of a number of stalks of corn that stand fourteen feet high and are loaded with ears. The captain has 100 acres of the corn that was planted with a cultivator for fodder. As it will have two weeks in which to grow yet, the ears will have time to perfectly develop. The captain plants early and his corn gets high enough to shade the ground before the hot weather comes on to bake it. The captain will have fine feed for his stock this year.

The Seventh-day Adventists are holding a camp meeting in the grove two blocks east of Colonel De La Vergne's house. Their annual state conference is to be held before the meeting is over. Already some twenty or thirty tents are erected in which parties from Denver, Boulder, Pueblo, Trinidad and other points will live from our own city, and quartered. A number of prominent speakers from the east are present and others are expected. It is said that their present numbers will be greatly increased early next week. At present preaching is announced for each evening but in a day or two the public will be invited to three services each day.

At 6 o'clock yesterday morning the home of Mr. W. H. Plumb of 1021 Cheyenne on North Cascade avenue was the scene of a fatal shooting affair. Death was caused by several bullets from the pistol of Mr. Plumb, from the effects of which he died at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the age of 41 years. At the time of the shooting Mr. Plumb was alone in the house, his wife and two children, who will soon arrive from Fort Dodge, Ia., where he had his home from the time he was nine years old, to start a wife and two children, who will soon arrive from Fort Dodge, Ia., where he had his home from the time he was nine years old, to start a wife and two children, who will soon arrive from the remains to Fort Dodge to-day.

Last Saturday night he went up in the dark at Denver, giving a illuminated exhibition. Lady Gray made the ascent on Sunday. The party goes to Cheyenne on the 8th. The jump will be made at 3 o'clock.

BASE BALL.

The Jacksons Win from the Crowells in a Close Game.

There was great ball at Athletic park yesterday afternoon, perhaps the most exciting game ever played on the grounds. The Jacksons won their game with the Crowells by a score of 9 to 8. There was a fine crowd out to witness the game, the day being perfect. Both clubs had been well selected and both had fine batteries. In fact it was a game of the batteries, as will be seen by a glance at the score.

The game was called at 3 o'clock and the Jacksons went to the bat. The batteries worked like machines and the batters went down in one, two, three order until the third inning, when each got a tally by errors. The Crowells got one ahead next time at bat, but the Jacksons followed it with two more in the fifth. They maintained the lead thereafter, and in the seventh made four and in the ninth two. The Crowells struggled manfully along and added one to their number in the seventh. When they came to the bat in the last half of the ninth they only had three to work opportunities with, and the fourth batted out Evans. The latter pitcher, had not for a minute. The Crowell boys did not lose a game to the Jacksons and they were bound to win if it could be done, and they began to pound Evans. For the first time he got somewhat rattled and let two men get to first, while the field made a number of errors. The result was that the Crowells got in five runs amid the most intense excitement. Their work strikers came to bat just at the above time and ended the game.

Both clubs had plenty of friends on the grounds and they did not fail to accept every opportunity for rooting. Some of the players took it up the fists fell thick and fast. Park Wilson, an old-time Colorado Springs catcher, but late of the Lincoln club, caught for the Jacksons. He played one of his old-time games and not a ball passed him. He did good throwing to the bases and is a much better batter than formerly. Evans, a new man to the diamond in this city, pitched for the Jacksons and did a work that was the admiration of all. He has speed, curves and a head. He will not throw to strong batters, but a better pitched game has not been seen in this city. The Jackson field with Woodruff, Curtis, Goddard, Bailey and other favorites did good work.

The Ostman brothers were the battery for the Crowells. F. Ostman pitched a fine game and what many believe should have been a winning game. Ed Ostman is a ball player and a catcher that would be a credit anywhere, but he should quit his batting. He goes too far with it though bright enough to hold his own. Last Sunday he made some pleasure of a game for many. The Crowell field, both in and out, did good work. Ferguson at first, Ristain at second and Couch at third were all good. Schneider at short and L. M. Ferguson at center field deserve mention.

J. D. Gavitt, of the France Hose company, umpired the game. It was a hard game to umpire and undoubtedly he tried to be fair, but there was a great deal of dissatisfaction among the spectators. The Crowells became greatly disheartened and disarranged with his work. Last night the Jacksons celebrated their victory at the hose room and invited their Crowell friends in to assist.

FRANK DUTTON & CO.
GENTS' FURNISHINGS.
WE know when we added this department to our stock, that there were nearly as many Gents' Furnishing stores in the city as Groceries or Real Estate dealers, but nevertheless we can own our goods cheaper than any other store, for we are supplied from the extensive Gents' Furnishing stock of Houghton & Dutton, Boston. We carry a full and select line, and our prices on every article in this department we guarantee to be the lowest in the city, except on collars and cuffs; for these we charge regular price, 20 cents each.
A FEW SAMPLE ITEMS.

An Income Property.
A good terrace or row of cottages that rent well will earn money for you while you sleep. Any kind of buildings can be built cheaper now than they ever could before, and we offer a fine location for a terrace at such a low price that a building can be erected upon it, and the rents will pay at least 25 per cent on the total cost. It is a lot in the central part of the city that fronts 100 feet on Cascade avenue, can be connected with sewer, and is offered for a short time at the low price of $3,500 which is at least $500 cheaper than any similar property can be bought for. Buy this, build a terrace on it, and the income from this one property will place you beyond the reach of want.
